Trouble in the Brooklyn Baseball Club, which has been brewing for some time, came to the surface yesterday when it became known that Edward Hanlon, the manager of Inown that Edward Hanlon, the manager of the team, and been notified by C. H. Ebbets, the president of the club, that his salary of $12,500 had been reduced to $6.000. This news, which was received by Hanlon in Baltimore, came in the nature of a severe blow inasmuch as he has been talking of making war on the American League, as one of the ringleaders of the minor league combination for some time past. Hanlon, however, lost no time in telegraphing Ebbets that he would not resume his duties as manager under any such circumstances; so Ebbets, with a handful of players, started South over the Pennsylvania road late yesterday afternoon.

was only last week that Ebbets, together with Henry W. Medicus, a newcomer in base-ball, purchased the holdings of H. R. Von der Horst in the Brooklyn club and secured 51 per cent, of the stock. The first thing Ebbets after this achievement, was to discuss reduction of Hanlon's salary. When Hanlon signed with the Brooklyns in 1899 he received a salary of $10,000 annually and he received a salary of $10,000 annually and proceeded to win two pennants in succession. Then Andrew Freedman offered him $25,000 for two years as manager of the New York Nationals, but the Brooklyn club came to the scratch with a similar offer, so Hanlon stayed where he was. But, after being raided by the American League, the Brooklyn club began to cut such a small figure in the baseball world that the club made little or no money until last year there was a good money until last year there was a good

In securing control of the Brooklyn club, therefore, Ebbets determined to reorganize things, beginning at the top. He said yester-day that he did not believe it was fair to day that he did not believe it was fair to reduce the salaries of ballplayers and not the salaries of the officials. He also declared that he had decided to reduce his own salary as a starter, while those of the secretary and treasurer of the club would probably be abolished altogether. As Hanlon had not been showing the desired results in the field, too, it was also decided, Ebbets said, field, too, it was also decided, Ebbets said, to ask him to accept a cut

"We considered that $12,500 was too much money for Hanlon to draw under the circum-stances," said Ebbets last night, "and so we stances," said Ebbets last night, "and so we stances," said Ebbets last night, "and so we saked him to accept $6,000 for the season, which is as much as any manager, not excepting John McGraw, gets for a season on the bench. If it is true that Hanlon has refused this offer, I am sorry, but we can do nothing more. If he would come here and help us build up the club so that it might make money again we would agree to gradually increase his salary until it reached an amount commensurate with his services. He has received more than $50,000 in salary from the Brooklyn club in five years, which is the Brooklyn club in five years, which is more than any other manager in the country can show for a similar time."

Hanion has turned down several offers from other clubs since he first took hold of the Brooklyns. This was because his friend the Brooklyns. This was because his friend Von der Horst was a stockholder in the Brooklyn club. Hanlon told Von der Horst some time ago that as long as the latter remained in baseball he would stick to him. But now that Von der Horst has sold out, Hanlon has no further pledge to live up to. Hanlon, by the way, payer signed a contract with by the way, never signed a contract with the Brooklyn club. He just had a verbal understanding and got his money, every dollar of it, from season to season. He pracunderstanding and got his money, every dollar of it, from season to season. He practically owns the Baltimore Eastern League club and is worth $150,000, or even more, it has been estimated. At one time there was a chance for Hanlon to secure the Washington club, but since he began to scheme against the American League it may be said that there is now no berth open to him, as President Johnson has marked him for slaughter some of these days. There are several National League clubs, however, that would probably be glad to secure his services. Hanlon was the captain of the Detroits who won the world's championship in 1857, and was afterward the manager of the Pittsburg club until he left to take hold of the Baltimores in 1893. It was Von der Horst who stood by Hanlon in Baltimore in every move he made, and the manager soon earned a world wide reputation. Speaking of the controversy last night, a well known buseball man said to The Stn reporter:

world wide reputation. Speaking of the controversy last night, a well known basebain man said to The Sun reporter:

"This cutting of the salaries of Hanlon and Ebbets comes at a pretty late day. Both of them got their money while Abell and Yonder Horst were putting up the sinews of war, but when these gentlemen cried enough there came a sudden change. Hanlon recently out Sheckard's salary from 48,000 to $2,400, saying that James played $1,200 to $2,40 coming on top of the Hanlon story is a wild yarn, one of the most absurd of its kind that has ever been sprung upon an unsuspecting public, to the effect that the combination of minor leagues—the Eastern, the Western, the Pacific Coast and the American Association—will begin war upon the American League by taking fifty players from the latter organization by offering them "enormous salaries." Baliplayers do not prefer minor leagues, as a rule, to major leagues. All of them know that the National League was signally beaten by the American League and that the minor leagues have no chance in such a struggle. But outside of this fact it is not probable that baliplayers who have bertha in American League cities like Boston, New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia, for instance, are going to give them up for jobs in Baltimore, Butfalo, Jersey City, Toledo, Columbus, Louisville, Grand Rapids, Kansas City and other minor league cities, where business, from a box office point of view, is rather dubious at times. If the minor league combine is ready to pay "enormous salaries," who is going to put up the pioney?

ENGLISH CHAMPION HERE, Jabez White and Charley Mitchell Passer

gers on the Cedric. Two of the passengers on the Cedric, which arrived here yesterday morning after a tempestuous voyage, were Jabez White, the English lightweight champion, and Charley Mitchell, Briton's former heavyweight champion, and charley white to pion. Both are here on a mission, White to meet Jimmy Britt, with whom he is matched, and Mitchell to corral all the stray American shekels in the event of a victory by backing his man. And it is quite evident that Mitchell his man. And it is quite evident that Mitchell intends to do something in this line, for he displayed a bunch of Bank of England fifty pound notes and other English currency.

Although this is White's first visit to this country he had more wellwishers at the pier to great him than some of the home-pier to greet him than some of the home-coming Americans on the same ship. Despite the early hour of the Cedric's arrival over thirty sports were on hand to welcome the foreigner and Mitchell. Among those present were: Tom O'Rourke, Ben Benton of Boston, who in a way engineered White's visit here: Dan Murphy, Dr. Frank O'Connell of Boston, Sam Fitzpatrick, Johnny King, Ben Hurtig, "Dobe" Harley and "Australian", Jimmy Ryan. Mitchell and his protege, after attending to their luggage, repaired to the Delevan, where they will remain while in New York. All day and evening the two Britons held a sort of levee. Many patrons of the prize ring called to look the English champion over and went away favorably impressed with White's appearance. The casual observer would not take White for a pugilist. In street attire he suggests anything but a boxer. But when the Briton strips it is another story. He is muscular wiry and very strong looking. White is of the lanky build. He has thin legs, long sin-ewy arms, a hatchetlike countenance, but broad shoulders. He has not much to say, but to all inquiries as to his trip here he simply replied in stereoptyped fashion:

"Thank you; I hope to do well." White has light hair and a very pale com-plexion. He says that he has a healthy color as a rule, but that he suffered from seasickplexion. He says that he has a healthy color as a rule, but that he suffered from seasickness on the trip and that he has not as yet recovered from the effects of it.

Acording to Mitchell, White was born on Sept. 17, 1875 and is therefore in his thirtieth? year. He stands 5 feet 7½ inches, and weighs in condition 130 pounds. White has been fighting for ten years. His style is more that of the American than the style of his own country. When White began his career he elected to mingle with American puglists. He got his first training when he became the sparring partner of Mike Sears of Boston, who fought in England. Then White joined hands with Dick O'Brien and other native boxers and soon got on to their tricks. White is best known for his two victories over Spike Sullivan, when the latter was supposed to be at his best.

Mitchell has great confidence in White's ability to whip Britt. I think that he is the best man of his weight England has produced in many a day, "said Mitchell, "and if he is beaten. Britt will know that he has been fighting. He is clever, shifty and can punch hard with either hand. He is also an excellent general and no doubt will surprise his detractors. At any rate, I will back him for a big sum." Ben Benton, who has seen White in all his principal scraps, echoed what Mitchell said, and added:

"White will make a lot of friends and make good here. He ls as clever as Britt, or in fact any lightweight in the world. When he lands that long left of his there will be something doing."

White will be seen in only one mill here. White he wins or loses he will return im-any lightweight in the world. When he lands that long left of his there will be something doing."

White will be seen in only one mill here. Whether he wins or loses he will return immediately to England, unless Mitchell changes his present plans. The fight with Britt is arranged for the latter part of April, and the details of the encounter are expected to be arranged to-day. White and Mitchell have planned to start for California the latter part of this week. Mitchell said that Joe Bewker, the English bantam champion, would not come here in a hurry. He added, though, that Owen Moran of Birmingham, who deleated Bowker a year or so ago, would come over in about two weeks time unless something intervened.

Some one of Mitchell's admirers, in a face tious mood, asked Charlie if he intended to do any fighting, and if he would meet John L. Sullivan. Mitchell declared that there was no danger of such a calamity. But he added: "I won't fight Sullivan, for he is coming back again, but I will meet Jim Corbett in a bare knuckle fight for $5.000 a side. I'm serious about this, and I will post a forfeit any time he is ready. Any place west of the Missouri River will suit me. All that I ask is five weeks of solid training."

CALIFORNIA FIELD DAY,

Plane for Alumni of Stanford and California to Meet Present Track Teams.

An interesting event in the world of sports, planned for this spring, is the proposed series of field days, in which a team composed of former athletes of Leland Stanford, Jr., University and the University of California will meet the present undergraduate teams. William Powell, the former crack hurdle and high jumper of the University of California, is the father of the scheme, and will probably captain the team. He has sucforna, is the lather of the scheme, and win probably captain the team. He has succeeded in securing for the alumni team a number of men who have made records not only on the Pacific Coast, but also in competition with Eastern athletes.

The names best known here in the East are: Plaw, the champion hammer thrower, who distinguished himself by his performances against Eastern college cracks in 1902, and Powell himself. Other Californians who have agreed to compete are: Dewing and Woolsey, sprinters; Cooley, captain of California's team last year: Wilcox, pole vaulter; Tibbets, distance runner: Hussey, broad jumper, and Hannigan, hurdler.

From Stanford the team will be strengthened by N. E. Dole, champion pole vaulter; O. E. Hyde, intercollegiate champion of the Pacific Coast in the shot put, and F. S. Holman, captain of the team last year.

This all star team will meet the present teams of the two universities some time before the Coast intercollegiates in April.

Fordham Baseball Players Hope to Beat Yale.

as well as ever. The squad has received the final "cut" The squad has received the final "cut" and eighteen men are retained on the 'varsity. McCarthy will be behind the bat, and it is hoped he will come up to expectations. He accred three home runs and put out eight men at second in yesterday's game. McLane, who will be in the box, has all his former speed. Raftis will be on third base. He is a good batter and an excellent fielder. On the freshman team last year he had a batting average of .320 and had but one error all season. Connolly or Ovies will be in left field. Both are good men and the choice is a difficult one, as both played as substitutes last year.
